

Perfume Info

@5577studio.com

There are 2 kinds:

- Normal Packing - This Perfume is 100% as you can get from counters in Department Stores, but at a much cheaper price.
- Tester Packing - This Perfume is purposely produced as a Tester in counters. With no Different in bottle shape and liquid contained in the Normal Packing, they have become a Hot Sell. The Only difference is it comes in white/brown box, but still have the brand name and code no. They are about RM20 -rm 40 cheaper than normal one.

Info on TESTER

A tester is the original perfume, in its original bottle, simply offered usually without its top or box. There is NO DIFFERENCE in fragrance, strength, or quality between a fragrance tester and one that comes in its original box, they're the same! All the testers are sold full and unused. (Testers have not been "tested")

Testers are even more discounted then the fancy boxed versions are great if you don't have a need for the fancy packaging. Many people prefer to purchase a tester, because they feel it to be a waste of money to spend so much extra, simply for the exact same fragrance, just with the box and top.

Testers are 100% authentic, fresh and completely full just like the original fragrance, however they are meant for the counter in a department store. They ship in a plain brown box and sometimes without a cap. The savings on the packaging means you save even more! Some say TESTER smell is more long lasting.

With the increasing popularity of "testers" these pieces are now commonly sold in the open market. Occasionally, the phrase "Not For Sale" (or NFS) may appear on testers or miniatures. This is because the product was originally produced for promotional purposes.

Info on FRAGRANCE

- Perfume, also called extract or extrait perfume, can include 15-40% perfume concentrates. This is the purest form of scented product and is the most expensive as a result.
- Eau de parfum contains about 7-15% perfume concentrates. This is the most popular and common form of perfume. It provides a long-lasting fragrance and generally doesn't cost as much as extract perfume.
- Eau de toilette has around 1-6% perfume concentrates. This makes for a light scent that doesn't linger as long as the more intense versions. It was originally intended to be a refreshing body splash to help people wake up in the morning.
- Eau de cologne is sometimes used interchangeably with the term eau de toilette. However, the concoction began as the name of a light, fresh fragrance mixed with citrus oils and was made popular by Napoleon. Some perfumers today have a version of this called eau fraiche.

Info on UNBOXED ITEM

Unboxed item are a great way to save! They are the same as the boxed version, always original, fresh and authentic!

Why are they unboxed?
